Project Coordinator (Part-time)

Salary:

Contract:

Fixed Term for 2 years

Location:

Central Cambridge

Faculty / Department:

The centre for Geopolitics within
CRASSH

Working pattern:

Part-time (0.8 FTE)

The University of Cambridge has a Hybrid Working Policy that aims to enable as many staff as possible to work in a hybrid way if they so wish, whilst recognising that some roles will include tasks that can only be performed on University premises.

Role summary

The Centre for Geopolitics seeks a part-time (4 days per week) project coordinator to provide dedicated administrative support to our Baltic Geopolitics Programme. The role will involve running meetings and organising events and a summer school, both in the UK and potentially overseas, tracking and facilitating budget income and expenditure, liaising with guest speakers, academics and stakeholders, and generally ensuring the smooth administrative running of the Programme.

The postholder will report to the Centre Coordinator but needs to be able to work independently, with plenty of initiative and great attention to detail. For the right individual, however, it will prove a fulfilling and exciting role, balancing event organisation (booking venues and accommodation, liaising with speakers and visitors, helping to promote events and being present on the day / evening) with organising meetings and managing a budget.

Key ResponsibilitiesEvent Organisation

With guidance from the Events & Comms Coordinator, the postholder will liaise with academics and directors to help implement an events programme within our Baltic Geopolitics Programme, ranging from small roundtables to conferences with 500+ delegates. This will require everything from venue assessment and booking, to processing expense claims, invoices and orders, to planning travel and accommodation for speakers and guests, to promoting the event – and being at the events themselves, which may take place during the day or the evening, and very occasionally at weekends.

Budget Management

With guidance from the Centre Coordinator, the postholder will carry out project financial administration, including: monitoring expenditure against budgets using the university financial system, processing expenses claims and invoices, raising purchase orders and managing purchasing requisitions in accordance with University financial procedures and financial regulations.

General Administrative Support

Providing administrative support to the Baltic Geopolitics Programme, as required. This might include (but will not be restricted to): assisting with production of reports by gathering and analysing data, organising meetings, preparing agendas, taking minutes and following up on actions, organising project events such as conferences, workshops, training sessions, establishing and maintaining communications with colleagues and representatives at different partner institutions to facilitate close working relationships, training junior administrators as needed, liaising with printers and other suppliers, helping with production of marketing materials, updating the website and social media platforms, setting up online meetings and events using standard software tools, taking a pro-active approach to 'pitching in' when something unexpected crops up.

The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

"Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made - and continues to make - a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff, committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society."

Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor, 2023
